Matching Challenge Monies

In Favor of Liberal Arts

On February 16 the campuses will jump to Creole/Cajun fiddle, accordion, washboard and drums—and enjoy an authentic American Mardi Gras celebration led by Grammy-award-winning Queen Ida and her zydeco band. Last November the college hosted accomplished London actors at a four-day festival with performances and classroom presentations of British poetry and drama.

Theologian Bryan Hehir came in the fall to speak on "The Economic Pastoral." Father Hehir submitted that this country's fiscal decisions are not about goods and services only, but also indicate the value we place on each other as individuals.

The Mount community is now relishing these and other cultural events, thanks in part to meeting two challenge grants. One, with the National Endowment for the Humanities, creates a $1.2 million endowment, the "Humanities Fund" which Dr. Barbara Becker, executive director for administration, says is "specially designated for programs and activities that enrich the teaching of the humanities at the Mount."

Another drive, to be completed by June 30, 1988, matching a grant from the William and Flora Hewlett Foundation, will create a $1 million endowment. Income will be used at presidential discretion to "maintain excellence in the liberal arts and sciences."

Benefits include professional development funding, which in the last two years has sent 17 faculty and administrators to seminars and institutes. Agnes Zelus, director of the academic advisement center at Chalon, last June attended a five-day professional institute at the University of Iowa, on academic advising.

The history and political science department, inspired by the 200th anniversary of the U.S. Constitution, is presenting four open symposia this year. Coming February 20 is Shirley M. Hufstедler, first U.S. Secretary of Education and former judge of the Federal Court of Appeals, who will speak on Justice; and Carole Goldberg-Ambrose, J.D., associate dean, UCLA school of law, April 30, on Liberty.

On March 21 the English department will offer a journalism panel featuring Susan Stamberg, anchorperson, NPR; Denis Britton, deputy managing editor, Los Angeles Times; Daniel C. Hallin, professor of communications and political science, UCSD. Their topic, "How do we know we know?" provokes consideration of the free journalistic process and responsibilities of both reporters and audience.

In the area of extended education, the college makes part of its contribution to others by sharing with the community, at no charge, most of its major cultural activities.

Mount St. Mary's College does not discriminate on the basis of race, color, creed, national origin, age or handicap in the administration of its admission policies, scholarship and loan programs, or in its educational programs.

Dear Mount Friends:

I am happy for a chance to tell you about the wonderful opportunities your support has opened up for our students, and glad to present you with some impressive and challenging statistics.

This year's increase in enrollment brings the headcount to 1,292. The quality of students admitted increased for the fourth successive year with the SAT average in the baccalaureate program topping the 1000 mark. Many of these students simply could not have a Mount education without your help. They come as girls with potential unrealized, often from circumstances that have not stretched their possibilities; they leave as young women who are confident and competent with an orientation toward values and service.

Residences on both campuses are filled, on our Doheny campus to overflowing! We had anticipated it would be several more years before our recent facility expansions would be filled. The need for further expansion is already evident!

We are pleased to report to you, too, that the retention rate in the college continues to improve: that is, students who come to the college stay in the college. Again, this is the result of the fine academic, student life, and support services your help makes possible. The associate in arts program of instruction and students services at Doheny have led to a retention and graduation rate unprecedented in the nation. Over 65% of the freshmen there receive their two year degree (compared to less than 5% in the Los Angeles community college system). We are now being contacted by colleges and universities from all over the United States asking us for the keys to this success.

At the Chalon campus our pre-med students are admitted to multiple, prestigious medical schools; students in pre-law and other professional programs have the same experience. Faculty consistently involve students in research, publication, and conference presentations, all of which is marvelous preparation for their graduate study and professional and personal lives. Our Women's Leadership Program continues to receive national attention and contributes important dimensions to our undergraduate students on both campuses.

Once again, without your support, our students would simply not have the opportunity to become the kind of successful women our society so desperately needs.

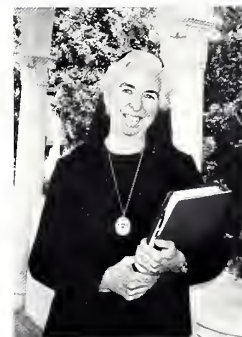

Now that our National Endowment for the Humanities matching grant is completed, and as we complete with your help the challenge from the William and Flora Hewlett Foundation this year, we count on your continued assistance as we meet new opportunities and take on greater challenges. We must work hard to complete our $10 million scholarship endowment fund. In this fund we now have named scholarships totaling $4.5 million. We need your help with this project which is absolutely essential to our service of future students. A named scholarship fund can be a beautiful memorial to a beloved family member.

Also, we have been challenged by the Weingart Foundation to add $1 million to our student loan fund. (Our loan default rate remains much lower than that of other independent colleges.) This foundation will give us $2 for each $1 raised—a good deal, which we hope to accept, confident of your continuing support.

I speak for all of us at the college—but especially for the students—as I thank you most sincerely for all that you are and all that you give to the Mount. We count on you as we grow into the future. Through your interest and support you share in the life of this college in a special way.

Please know that you will remain in our prayers and grateful thoughts all through 1988.

SISTER ANNE MARIE

Sincerely yours,

Sister Magdalen

THE ASSOCIATE IN ARTS PROGRAM COMES OF AGE

By Mariette Sawchuk

Mrs. S. E. Posey

Chester Place in First Glory

Over half a century and counting, before the Doheny estate was reborn as a college, Chester Place was the exclusive showcase for Los Angeles social, political and church life.

Land to the southwest of the Old Pueblo, in the area of present-day Figueroa and Adams Boulevard, was purchased about 1875 from the Newhall family by Nathan Vail, who built a home at 711 West Adams. In 1886 the house and surrounding 15 acres were bought by Judge and Mrs. Charles Silent. A retired Arizona Supreme Court Justice, he subsequently had the property subdivided and named Chester Place as a memorial to his young son, killed in a hunting accident while a student at Stanford.

In the late 1890s on property at Eight Chester Place, architects Sumner Hunt and Theodore Eisen oversaw the construction of a three-story Gothic Renaissance residence, 10,500 square feet—on contract to

The associate in arts program on the Doheny campus is twenty-five years old this year. The mood on campus, however, is not staid and retrospective as you might expect at a silver jubilee; it's vibrant and confident—like a coming-of-age bash. The integrated combination of academic courses and support services helps students in the associate in arts program to succeed, often in spite of overwhelming obstacles such as poor high school preparation, time-consuming family responsibilities, and low self-esteem. In an American College Testing (ACT) study, Lee Noel found that 50% of the freshman class in community colleges drop out, and further attrition occurs during the sophomore year. Other studies cited by the Office of Minority Equity in Lansing, Michigan, show that 80% of minority students who enroll in college leave before earning a degree. At the Mount, 65–70% of those who enter as freshmen complete the associate in arts degree and 50% go on to baccalaureate study, compared to 20–30% at other four-year colleges. Some ultimately attain master's and doctoral degrees.

The figures are particularly impressive given the challenges which Doheny students face. In this year's freshman class, 98% are first-generation college students; approximately 60% come from single-parent families; and 50% live at or below the poverty level. In ethnic composition, the class reflects the cultural diversity of the Los Angeles area: 52% Hispanic, 23% Black, 14% Anglo, and 11% Asian. Many of these students are what educational researchers call "high risk": that is, prone to drop out or to fail. High risk students have high school grade-point averages (GPA) of 2.0 or below; their SAT scores average 655 or less; they have few college-graduate role models. Most work off campus and many commute. Frequently, their families are uninformed about the demands which college makes on students, and experience financial hardship, not from the costs of college which are covered by scholarships, but from the loss of the student's income.

The associate in arts program empowers students to succeed through challenging academic programs backed up by substantial support services. Students may earn an associate in arts degree in five areas: business, early childhood education, liberal arts, physical therapy assistant, and pre-health sciences; each serves a different need and appeals to a different constituency.

Mark Alhanati directs the associate in art business program which offers study in business administration and in travel and tourism. About half the students who enter these programs plan to transfer to the Chalon campus baccalaureate program; the rest are unsure of their academic and professional goals. Articulation between the two campuses has been carefully worked out, and one of Alhanati's goals for the current year is to unite business students on both campuses socially as well as academically. He has initiated monthly meetings for all business students which will alternate between the Chalon and Doheny campuses.

In addition to fostering a sense of unity, he believes the meetings will help Doheny students become comfortable with the advisors, mentors and students on the Chalon campus. "Poor self-esteem is one of our greatest problems. Many of our associate students have a deeply-rooted belief that they aren't very smart—and sometimes they go out of their way to prove it!" He pauses and adds fiercely, "But I am not going to let them fail." Like many other teachers on the Doheny campus, Alhanati's response to this negative attitude is a creative approach to teaching (flashcards in accounting class!), a great deal of positive reinforcement, and immediate intervention when a student "messes up."

Sister Imelda D'Agostino, director of the early childhood education program, agrees. "My goal," she says, "is to graduate a student who will influence the burgeoning field of child development and who will be an advocate, personally and politically, on children's issues." The program is designed to fulfill the course work and the supervised field work required for a Regular Children's Center Instructional Permit from the California Commission on Teacher Credentialing. In addition, the state requires a year of teaching in a child development program which Sister Imelda helps the student to plan for and integrate into her two years of study. Upon receiving the associate degree, students can transfer to the baccalaureate program in child development or education (diversified major), and about 75% of them do go on to baccalaureate study. Some, having taught several years in the LAUSD, return to the college's graduate division for a master's of science in education.

In spite of all the paperwork involved in dealing with state credentialing requirements, Sister Imelda finds her greatest challenge in overcoming fallacies about young children. "Everyone tends to teach as he or she was taught, with only one right answer to any question. The challenge is to help students take an experiential approach that works best with young children. Fortunately, we have the child development center at Doheny, where students observe and interact with children four hours a week starting in their second semester."

Developing the skills that lead to success is a major goal of all associate programs, according to Sister Rose Leonard Stevling who is the director of the advisement center and of the liberal arts program. The liberal arts program attracts two kinds of students: those planning on a baccalaureate degree at the Chalon campus, and those with no clear academic or career goals. For the first group, the liberal arts program provides an opportunity to fulfill general studies requirements in a supportive environment where they can improve their reading, writing and math skills and develop better study habits. Most move into the baccalaureate program in one or two years.

Others enter the liberal arts program with a vague belief that higher education could be important for their lives, but unsure of the direction they want their lives to take. These students are the most tentative about their commitment to college and require a great deal of time and support. Sister Rose Leonard keeps them for herself. Although she goes over placement tests and admissions materials before meeting each student, her initial interview can take up to an hour and a half. Wise to the procrastination and avoidance which come from poor self-esteem, she phones students when they miss appointments, confers with their teachers, checks with the learning resource center to make sure they are following through on recommended tutorials and drops them encouraging notes. Patient, firm and supportive, she sticks with them. Why? Because she understands the odds most of her advisees are bucking. "Every girl here is really struggling with academics, family responsibilities and work. Many work twelve hours on-campus and then go to other jobs off-campus. We're also getting single parents who have to juggle study, work and child care. These students are under a lot of pressure." She believes in what the liberal arts program has to offer them: "It helps them become assured, self-confident and articulate. It opens avenues they have never even thought about."

While the liberal arts program offers students the opportunity to explore new fields, the physical therapist assistant (PTA) program attracts students who are very focused about their career goals. Some are recent high school graduates who have been introduced to this career through health science classes. Others have taken time off from formal education to work and raise families, and are now drawn back by a career that offers a good salary, interesting, valuable work, and mobility. Students and faculty alike are quick to point out that the physical therapist assistant is a professional in her own right. Unlike physical therapist aides, with whom they are often confused, physical therapist assistants are fully qualified to perform almost every treatment a physical therapist prescribes. Physical therapists and PTA's work as a team: the physical therapist evaluates the patient and plans a treatment program which the physical therapist assistant carries out. Denise Soucy-Hansen, the academic coordinator of the program, says militantly, "The PTA programs shouldn't be regarded as a stepping stone. It's a separate and an important career."

One of only two PTA programs in the Los Angeles area, the Mount's curriculum is a demanding one which requires slightly less than two and a half years to complete. In the first year students take liberal arts, fundamental science courses, and some psychology and sociology. The liberal arts and social sci-

Carrie Estelle Doheny

Mrs. S. E. Posey, wife of Oliver Posey, a mining engineer. The Posey family—two sons were attending Berkeley—had resided at Number Eight only a few years when the house was sold to Mr. and Mrs. Edward Laurence Doheny, shortly after their marriage. By Thanksgiving of 1901 the Dohenys were established in what was to be Mrs. Doheny's home for over 50 years.

Edward Doheny, born in Wisconsin, prospected in the Southwest as a young man and, in partnership with Charles Canfield, discovered the first oil deposit near downtown Los Angeles on Glendale Boulevard. Carrie Estelle Betzold Doheny came with her parents to Los Angeles as a young girl. Story has it that Edward Doheny heard her voice on the telephone and determined to meet its owner. They were married in August 1900.

During the years they lived at Number Eight, the Dohenys made gradual changes throughout the house. In 1906 the open patio was enclosed to create the Pompeian Room, complete with faurile glass dome by Louis Tiffany, pillars of Siena marble and a bronzed gold-leaf frieze. In 1913 a glass and steel conservatory, the Palm House, was erected to display over 5000 orchid plants, palms and other tropicals.

The Wigwam, a games room adjoining the car- riage house for Number Eight, contained a bowling alley, games tables and darts, and was decorated with animal skin rugs.

During Mrs. Doheny's lifetime, a variety of entertainment styles reigned. Formal dinners in the Pompeian Room with a 40-foot mirror-topped table and gold dinnerware were not uncommon. Charitable causes dear to the lady's heart were not overlooked, in that the rotunda was equipped with floor sockets so that sewing machines could be put to use. World-class musicians performed in the Louis XV music room ences are as important to their education as the science classes. "They need to be able to talk with their patients," says Soucy-Hansen, "and to realize that patient injury or disability causes emotional and social problems as well." The second year is devoted to physical therapy classes and clinical internships. Despite the rigors of the program, students do well if they can meet the challenge of a difficult anatomy class in their first semester. Soucy-Hansen gives each of the freshmen an urgent pep-talk. "My hardest task as an advisor is to convince the freshmen to take their studies seriously from the first day. They are expected to take very difficult courses during their first semester, and good study habits are extremely important." She does more than talk: Soucy-Hansen has been known to spend hours in the laboratory helping panicked freshmen with a course that she herself does not teach.

Like other program directors, she is proud of the way in which her students—many of them struggling with poverty, outside work, and growing children—make a new and better life for themselves. Opportunities like the Navy reserve program which pays for tuition and books in exchange for a commitment of weekend and summer service help some students finance their education. Selected hospitals in the area also offer similar programs. Soucy-Hansen is excited about these offers. "I love these students. We work together as a group very intensely and over the two years we get very close."

Students in the physical therapist assistant program are not the only ones planning to pursue a career in health care. Many enter the college hoping to major in nursing or pre-medicine. Often, these students are not aware of how many rigorous science courses they face. The nursing program, for example, requires a freshman to take thirty-one units in science, including chemistry, anatomy and physiology. In the pre-medical major, chemistry, organic chemistry, biochemistry and physics are considered "preparation" for degree requirements. Students who have had few laboratory science and math classes in high school are overwhelmed. Those with poor basic skills and shaky study habits have no chance for success. These competitive programs, moreover, require applicants to have substantial grade point averages, which many aspiring students lack. The pre-health sciences program, formalized as part of the associate degree program in fall of 1986, offers them a chance to strengthen their science preparation and basic skills enough for acceptance to nursing or pre-medicine at the Chalon campus or in other baccalaureate programs of their choice. It also provides students the opportunity to look realistically at their own talents and the educational requirements of their chosen careers. A special part of the program is a course called Careers in Health which introduces students to a variety of health-related jobs such as health administration, radiologic technician, midwife, medical assistant, operating technologist, medical social worker, medical information technologist and home health aide to name a few. Many of these require less intense preparation in science and math.

Sister Rose Leonard, as director of advisement for the associate program, became aware of the need for such an area of study as she watched the preparation of students in math and science grow weaker. In research conducted by the National Center for the Advancement of Educational Practices, Professor Paul Dehart Hurd found that only 35% of the 3 million high school students who graduate annually have completed chemistry, 34% have completed three years of math, 10% have completed physics and 8% have completed calculus: courses which used to be required of most college-bound students.

"Many students who want to be nurses and doctors simply need more time to beef-up their preparation in science and math and get their GPAs up," says Sister Rose Leonard. "Pre-health sciences allows them to take prerequisites for nursing and pre-med and some general studies classes. At the end of two years they have a degree and can apply to the Chalon campus, or to schools in the state university system. If our program is too hard, then nursing or medicine isn't the right career." She acknowledges that it can be difficult to help a student face the end of her girlhood dream, but stresses that advisors always help students look for other career options. Against all odds, students do make it. Sister remembers one feisty young woman who struggled for three years to get the background and GPA for the nursing program, was accepted and graduated triumphantly. "Students take a little more time in the pre-health sciences program, but they aren't coddled. If they go on to nursing, physical therapy or pre-med, they generally do very well."

Clearly, all the program directors and coordinators in the associate program are excited about what their courses of study offer. While associate students make great strides, however, the underlying question—often unspoken—is whether or not their education is of the same quality as that offered in the baccalaureate programs. Dr. Jane Lingua, acting dean of the Doheny campus for the 1987–88 academic year, has taught biology on both campuses. She responds to the issue of quality emphatically. “There may be different pedagogy in the associate program, but not different quality. Remedial classes, of course, don’t have equivalents in the baccalaureate program, but courses with the same number have the same outcome regardless of which program or campus offers them.”

Sister Kathleen Kelly, academic dean of the Doheny campus for five years and an American Council on Education Fellow for the 1987–88 academic year, bristles at the suggestion that academic programs at Doheny may be lower in quality because the campus offers remedial classes. At UCLA, Berkeley, Stanford—all have to place a substantial portion of their freshmen in remedial writing classes. Even the most talented and privileged students no longer read, write, speak, listen, compute or study well enough to succeed in college without help.” In her welcome to the faculty at the beginning of each academic year, Sister Kathleen has always stressed quality. “Working with the academically under-prepared students does not mean sacrificing quality but rather thinking through curricular change and methodology and providing what is necessary for them to achieve.”

All the faculty in the associate program are quick to give credit to the extensive support services which back up their own efforts. The detailed testing and thorough advisement which Sister Rose Leonard coordinates help to insure that each student has a schedule of courses just right for her—hard enough to be challenging but within reach of her capabilities. Often, this means taking one or more courses in the College Skills program where reading, grammar, spelling, basic math, and study skills are taught. (These courses cannot be credited toward the baccalaureate degree.)

Advisors, faculty members and the dean cooperate in the early warning system, which alerts students to academic difficulties while there is still time to correct them. Teachers notify advisors in October and March of students who are experiencing difficulties in class; then advisors and students meet to plan a course of action. The remedy may be more time spent in the Learning Resource Center, better attendance at class or some —the gold-lacquered Steinway was Mr. Doheny's 1905 birthday gift to his wife. The South Garden was the site of frequent events. It was also the area for pony rides to delight the Doheny granddaughter.

Though the Dohenys had other residences in this country and in Mexico, Chester Place was always "home." Two large lions guarded the main entrance, and on the South Garden steps, two smaller sphinx-like beasts were on duty.

Edward Doheny died in 1935. Carrie Estelle Doheny continued at Chester Place until her death in 1958, and willed the estate to the Los Angeles archdiocese. The late Cardinal James F. McIntyre invited the Mount to use the property as part of the college. Voila! in 1962, a Mount St. Mary's downtown campus.

help with time management. The dean also meets with students who have two or more early warning notices or whose troubles persist to mid-semester. For most students, this extra attention and follow-up on the part of faculty and administration is enough to help them succeed. Students who earn less than a 2.0 semester GPA go on academic probation for a semester during which they meet with a support group facilitated by a trained counselor. Most are back in good academic standing after one semester.

Even with early warnings and counseling, many students in the associate program would fail were it not for the help of the dedicated staff of the learning resource center. Led by the director of the center, Sister Margaret Clare Borchard, tutors work one-on-one with individual students to help them with reading, grammar, spelling, writing, math, basic science concepts. Self-paced learning programs are also available in many different subject areas and the staff, in consultation with faculty members, put together a package of programmed learning and individual tutoring to meet each student's needs.

All these academic programs deal with the development of skills, but equally important is the development of self-esteem. Students for whom school has meant struggle may not be able to envision themselves as successful. Several of the special programs at Doheny address this problem. Extended orientation, for example, is a semester-long class in which students meet weekly with a small group of their peers and a faculty member. The group gives students a chance to discuss their experiences in college, solve problems and examine their own gifts, abilities and goals in a realistic and positive way. During the course of the semester, each student does a personal gifts assessment, a personal skills inventory and a career exploration project which she discusses with the director of the career center.

The career center helps students to set concrete goals and explains the steps they must take to achieve them. In addition to offering workshops and classes on various careers and on resume writing and interviewing, the center also arranges internships in the sophomore year. The internship is often the student's introduction to a career and a great boost to her self-esteem. The outreach program, which involves students in community service either through fieldwork or through volunteer service, shows students that each one of them can make a difference in the lives of other people and in their communities. This opportunity increases student awareness of important issues in our society and enables students to put some of the ideas they have learned in the classroom into action.

All these support services boil down to carefully designed ways of changing habits of thinking and behaving. Sister Kathleen puts the philosophy of the associate program this way: "If you believe you can succeed, you are likely to engage in good behavior. If you believe you cannot succeed, you are likely to do something entirely different — come to class without a notebook or a pencil, arrive late, forget your assignment, skip a test. We are designing a program where good behavior pays off. Students will discover that by paying attention and studying, they are learning."

Ultimately, the success of the associate in arts program must be attributed to countless individual acts of caring by teachers, advisors, counselors, tutors, administrators and staff. The program succeeds when Mark Alhanati gives the best lectures of his academic career "because these students need my best." The program succeeds when Sister Imelda comes into her child development class pretending to be a four-year-old with new shoes "to get the students involved in what they are learning." The program succeeds when Sister Joseph Adele Edwards takes a group of her drama students to a play because "they've never had a chance to go and the experience really transforms them." It succeeds when Sister Rose Leonard uses her "spare" time calling students to remind them about placement testing. It succeeds when Sister Pancratius Cremins of the learning assistance center explains a comma splice to yet another student as patiently as if it were the first time she taught it.

The associate program is having a birthday. Happy 25th!

The Annual Fund year reported in this issue ran from July 1, 1986-June 30, 1987. All gifts received from July 1, 1987, will be acknowledged in next year's honor roll.

The Alumnae and Development staff have worked hard to avoid errors and omissions. With a report of this kind, however, mistakes can and do occur. We apologize for any oversights or errors and would appreciate being informed of such mistakes.

Project Grants

The AT&T Foundation has awarded a $50,000 grant for the expansion of the STEP (Strides Toward Educational Proficiency) program to include freshmen and sophomores in high school, as well as for the research to document the college's intervention programs for replication at other schools.

In its letter of transmittal, the AT&T board of directors wrote: "Your pioneering efforts will impact the lives of hundreds of young people in Los Angeles, and produce a new labor force for the City's businesses."

The Times Mirror Foundation has matched the college's grant from the Consortium for the Advancement of Private Education, thus underwriting completely the 18-month program on cultural diversity and learning. This program will be featured in MSMC Magazine later in 1988.

Finally, a $200,000 grant, renewable for a second year, has been received from the U.S. Department of Education under its Title III program for developing institutions. These funds are being used for the computerization of offices providing institutional and student services, and for the development of the college's enrollment management plan.

Priority to Scholarships

The Thomas and Dorothy Leavey Foundation will establish a $500,000 endowed scholarship fund at the college during the next two years. This pledge has boosted the scholarship endowment over the $4 million mark—almost halfway toward the college's goal of $10 million by 1990.

Other new gifts to the endowed scholarship fund include: James R. Dougherty Foundation, $10,000 for students in the leadership program; Lewis A. Kingsley Foundation, $10,000; and a pledge of $2,000 annually for the Optimist Club of Lawndale.

Grants of expendable scholarship funds included: Atlantic Richfield Foundation (ARCO), $10,000 for students who come into the college through the STEP (Strides Toward Educational Proficiency) Program; A. H. Kerr Foundation, $3,000; Samuel Goldwyn Foundation, $12,000 for nursing students; $5,200 from the Southern California Gas Company; $2,500 from Avery International; $2,000 from Glendale Federal; a $6,000 pledge from General Telephone; $2,000 from Security Pacific Bank; $1,000 renewable from TICOR; and $2,000 from the Monsanto Fund.

The Doheny Mansion, with backing from the regents council, turns into Casino Royale.

Chamber music's impresario

The Los Angeles City Council has recognized MaryAnn Bonino '61 with a council resolution praising her success with the Da Camera Society and Chamber Music in Historic Sites. Her illuminated scroll reads in part:

"Whereas, Dr. MaryAnn Bonino is the founder of the Da Camera Society, an organization sponsored by Mount St. Mary's College and dedicated to providing world-class musical performances in unique and exquisite architectural settings; and...

"Whereas the Da Camera Society is celebrating its eighth season of movable musical performances in historic sites, and held its first season as part of Los Angeles' bicentennial in 1980; and

"Whereas, since that time, under her guidance and leadership, the Da Camera Society has helped thousands of Angelenos enjoy masterpiece performances in beautiful settings, and is now expanding its efforts to Catalina Island and San Pedro;

"Now, therefore, be it resolved by the adoption of this resolution by the Los Angeles City Council that MaryAnn Bonino be commended for her outstanding efforts to integrate music and architecture into memorable and enriching art experiences; and

"Be it further resolved that the Da Camera Society continue its excellent work in providing Los Angeles citizens with a new art form."

Bonino also has a role in the UK/LA '88 Celebration of British Arts. Her Da Camera Society is presenting Cambridge University's Brodsky String Quartet here, at the Villa Maria Tudor mansion—Valentine Day concerts in downtown Los Angeles.

Bonino, with Councilman Zev Yaroslavsky at city hall ceremony, recalls "Ours was a fairly radical vision when we began the Society 15 years ago."

Keri is president-elect of the board of directors of the California branch of the American Association of Mental Retardation, a trustee on the Santa Clara Community College Board, Santa Clara County Woman of the Year in Business and Professions, and a room mother for her daughter's class.

'67 Elaine Ziegler Hagedorn recently moved to Lubbock, TX, where she works as an RN in the area of chemical dependency. She and her husband have three children.

'67 Joan McMahon Champion, mother of two, is a school nurse practitioner for the San Diego schools.

'67 Betsy McDonald Freeman is living in Bismarck, ND, with her husband and three sons.

'67 In addition to caring for her family of three children and maintaining a small social work office, Peggy Jacobs Christopher has been teaching college juniors in the School of Social Work at the University of Pittsburgh. In December, Peggy completed the course work for her doctorate in social work.

'67 Billie Anne Bay enjoyed a delightful summer in Hawaii.

'67 Suzanne Kiechle completed special training in vocal physiology and is presently teaching voice and providing vocal rehabilitation. She co-produced an album of Christian music for which she did the vocal arranging and conducting.

'68 Because her family consists of two pre-school and two elementary school age children, Kathy Villar Jacinto says she has put teaching on hold and is back in "Mommy 'n Me" classes.

'68 Theresa Duarte Zaklan is a busy volunteer in Dugway, UT. She works with women's clubs and schools, teaches Sunday school, and coaches soccer.

'69 Beverly Opsitnick Yocum, her husband, and two sons traveled to Alaska last summer. She is beginning her eighth year teaching first grade at St. Cyril's, where she has been assistant principal for seven years.

'69 With both thriving child and gardening business, Jeanne Burnham Jones still frequents museums, zoos and the great outdoors. In September, the family vacationed on a chartered yacht out of Maui.

'69 Maureen Peverada Chris is teaching kindergarten for the Saddleback Valley Unified School District. She and her husband traveled through Canada to the International Baccalaureate Conference last year.

'70D Mary Hannasch is still working as a prison supervisor in Jean, NV.

'70D Kathleen Callen and two friends are opening Maranatha Academy in North Las Vegas serving pre-kindergarten to eighth grade students. As a member of the board of directors, Kathleen is in charge of the pre-kindergarten program and teaches part time.

'71 Anne Dietz Hessler taught Russian history during the spring at the University of Missouri.

'72 Sharon McBride Valente was awarded the Cornaro Scholarship for graduate studies from Kappa Gamma Pi, the national Catholic college graduate honor society. A clinical specialist in private practice and adjunct professor in the department of nursing at usc, Sharon will use the grant to complete her doctorate in counseling psychology.

'73 Mary Corty O'Connor teaches CPR and works part time in the intensive care unit at Anaheim Memorial Hospital. This year she will be teaching in the Confirmation program in her parish.

'75 After twenty years teaching in the Los Angeles Archdiocese and one year at the Saudi Arabian International School in Jeddah, Mary Elizabeth Depp Blackett and her husband are living in Yokohama, Japan, where Mary Elizabeth continues to enjoy working with children.

'77 Yvette Markos Luque had a very busy year as vice president of the Visiting Nurse Association of Los Angeles. She has been involved in the Medicare and Medi-Cal reimbursement issues.

'78 Katherine Hunter experienced what she calls "two of life's major firsts" when she and her husband moved into their first home and welcomed their first child.

'78 Margaret Roslansky McKean completed her school health credential and is working as a school nurse. She has been on the Tahoe Parent's Nursery School board for two years for which she received the Volunteer of the Year Award.

'78 After completing executive education sessions at Wharton School of Business, Ann Dechow was assigned to the home office of Delco Electronics in Kokomo, IN. She works as a market analyst for Automotive Audio Systems.

◀ University panelists have last words as John Stearns, moderator, closes the program.

◀ Kelly Kester, a senior double-majoring in gerontology and English, was able to fly home to Colville, Washington, assured she had made her mark defending her Honors Senior Thesis.

It wasn't simple. The challenge was to telescope her 50-page thesis into an hour's oral presentation for interested students, faculty and administrators—never mind her honors committee.

Kester's research is on Kierkegaard and Dostoevsky. She draws parallels between the religious philosophies of both men in the context of Christian existentialism. She analyzes paradox, suffering, freedom of choice, absurdity, and the role of the individual.

To satisfy the interdisciplinary requirement for the honors paper, Kester selected a topic with emphases in religious studies and literature.
